Pre-Conference Leadership Seminar, 2020

Rethinking Land-grant Universities in a post-COVID-19 world:

Challenges and opportunities of disruptive change for innovation across the teaching, research, and engagement mission.

DATE – Friday, November 6, 2020

VIRTUAL SESSION – Zoom ID: 929 0874 8464

Passcode 542959

FSLI ENCORE THEME

The COVID-19 pandemic has forced immediate and radical changes in universities around the world. Beyond the critical and necessary responses to ongoing public health needs, universities are faced with a pressing mandate to change and adapt in the face of new realities. Institutions have begun to see this massive disruption as not just a challenge, but also an opportunity for rethinking the role of higher education institutions in a post-COVID-19 world.

Encore Session Objectives:

This FSLI Encore Session will explore:

- What are the implications of the current pandemic for universities, and especially those with traditional on-campus residential models?
- How has the university's role in society shifted, and what are the implications of this massive disruption across the teaching, research, and outreach missions?
- How does this sudden shock exacerbate or offset the longer term risks with which universities were already grappling and will continue to face, including changing student demographics and demand; threats to federal funding and research capacity; and evolving R&D investments by private industry?
- How can universities best manage the short and intermediate-run challenges while also creating longer-term opportunities for innovation, adaptation, and change?
